OCTOBER 4, 1953

Phil and Kay, Drew Dudley, Marie Louise Bousquet, Jerome Zerbe, and little David arrived for lunch.

In the afternoon the Grahams and ourselves went over to see the Gruenthers, where Al, with his usual kindness, gave the children a lot of toys which enraptured them. There were quite a lot of people there, including Chiperfield, with whom I had a long talk. He said he had always favored foreign aid but thought unless EDC were ratified this winter there would be almost a total cessation of appropriations for it in the next Congress.

The Grahams and ourselves had dinner tonight at the Meurice Hotel with Camille Gutt.

Monsieur and Madame Saugnier, the Belgian [redacted] head of the uranium development in the Belgian Congo, who has always been [redacted] helpful to the United States Government, were there.
